

An Island Designed to Inspire

Fairmont Maldives Sirru Fen Fushi launches new art and adventure experiences for families

With creativity at its core, the five-star Fairmont Maldives Sirru Fen Fushi has curated a new menu of experiences designed to entertain and inspire families. After embarking on a boat trip to discover local marine life or snorkelling the expansive coral house reef, travellers can take inspiration from their verdant island environment and create their own marine-inspired masterpiece; paint, sculpt or draw in the beachside art studio, under the watchful eye of a resident artist.

The on-site Art Studio offers all of the tools and materials for art-enthusied travellers to try their hand at coconut, canvas and wood painting, sculpturing, and array of crafting activities; from designing a dream catcher and weaving authentic Maldivian rugs, to crafting bespoke jewellery from seashells. Here, guests are encouraged to create unique keepsakes inspired by the tropical island surroundings to treasure for a lifetime in the Art Studio, or even in the privacy of their own villa.

With sustainability in mind, Fairmont Maldives offers an array of immersive activities to promote eco-education. Having launched a unique coral regeneration project, underwater poplar treeds and endemic planted coral encourage the settlement of marine life, acting as an artificial reef which will become a vibrant and colourful undersea garden once populated, patrolled my manta rays and over 250 species of tropical fish. Aiming to educate the next generation of eco-conscious travellers, Fairmont Maldives also offers guided snorkelling and educational talks with a marine biologist as part of their Ocean Discovery programme, coral and coconut tree planting, turtle releases and exploration of the majestic manta ray cleaning station.

Additionally, adventure loving families can head out on a sunset dolphin tour, sail to an uninhabited island for a castaway picnic, snorkel the thriving coral house reef or head out on a Maldivian dhoni for a sunset fishing experience, before immersing themselves in the local island culture with a family cooking class and cultural tours. Tiny travellers will also delight in the array of thrill-seeking activities offered at the Kids Club and Teen Club, 'Majaa', from kayaking or jet-skiing the lagoon and cycling sandy walkways, to making a splash in the resort's 200m infinity pool – the largest in the Maldives.

Embodying an earthy elegance, flowing from the shore to every detail of design, the resort is constructed to stimulate creativity. Fairmont Maldives is home to 120 lavish villas with private pools, authentic Maldivian furnishings and a designated Villa Host on hand to cater to guests' every need. Families can stay in the Overwater Villas with see-through floors and oversized copper bathtubs, perched overlooking the Indian Ocean, Beach Villas with luxurious outdoor bathrooms and private tropical gardens, or in the new Tented Jungle Villas for a true castaway experience in the heart of the Maldivian jungle.

Having opened its doors in May 2018, Fairmont Maldives Sirru Fen Fushi is an idyllic island paradise dedicated to reinventing family holidays in the Maldives, and inspiring both the artist and adventurer in every traveller.
